The only one who can heal this world is an insane lord who revives the dead to serve him, but this is impossible. A great evil is descending on the lands. The amino acid leucine is known to activate the respiratory center in brain. In order to examine the possibility that brain tissue itself contains a bioactive metabolite of leucine, rat cortex was sampled at intervals following sacrifice of the animal and the concentration of leucine was measured by high-performance liquid chromatography. In cortex sampled 0.5 to 3 hours following sacrifice, the concentration of leucine was higher than in the remaining brain areas and was 5- to 8-fold higher than that found in plasma. Those who love the series have been waiting for this title and the mere fact that it is being announced is exciting already. The title will be released worldwide in 2010 and it will feature high end CG-styled graphics similar to the graphics that were used in FINAL FANTASY XIII-2 as well as unique new gameplay elements. It was just this summer when I was first introduced to the DRAGON MARKED FOR DEATH! Here is the story behind the project, brought to you by development director and producer Yoshinori Kitase and the team at Square Enix. Q : Can you give us a brief summary of the story for Dragon Marked for Death? YOSHINORI KITASE : From the FINAL FANTASY III game comes a new tale of survival and adventure. At the very beginning of the story, a young man named Kagetora arrives in the Grand Castle in search of his “bride”, a girl called Muramasa with whom he will marry. At that time, a powerful threat is approaching the walls of the castle, but he must first be persuaded to seek the help of a mysterious girl called Suiko. Q : How does this journey begin for the main character and what will the main character’s journey be like? Will it be similar to that of Tidus in the previous FINAL FANTASY XIII game? YOSHINORI KITASE : As the main character, we have decided to use the name Kagetora to represent the main protagonist. He is a young man who has lost his wife in the line of duty as a Royal Knight. He is sent away on this journey in order to find a certain person. As the person he is looking for is so closely associated with the Royal Knights, the main character spends most of his time training. However, he does visit the city in order to do some shopping at the local market. In the bff6bb2d33
